som drove up to the entrance to Ludlow Street Jail, and a clerk from the office of Cochran & Clark entered the Jail, bearing the news of the granting of a stay of proceedings. He handed the note personally to Mr. Sharp, who read it without showing any signs of emotion or making any comments upon it. Mr. Sharp then handed it to his wife, who reed it and seemed to be delighted at the news.

Judge Potter granted the stay of proceedings in the Jacob Sharp case on the grounds.

Judge Potter granted the stay of proceedings in the Jacob Sharp ease on the grounds that there is a reasonable doubt that the judgment reached in the Court of Oyer and Terminer should stand, and he orders a stay in the execution of such judgment until an appeal shall be decided by the general term. The news of the decision by Judge Potter reached the city about noon and created no little excitement. A number of people flocked to the Court-house at once to ascertain the truth of the reports. Among them was Congressman Bourke Cockran, who was met by a reporter in the building. All the eminent pleader for Sharp would say was: "I am very well satisfied with the decision." He then passed on, calmly triumphant. Nearly all the leading lights in the trial are out of town. Judge Barrett is at the Grove Hotel, Block Island.

**JUGGE POTTER'S DECISION.**

Judge Potter, in his decision, says: "Having become impressed with the clear conviction that the trial court fell into error in the admission of some of the evidence offered by the prosecution, and that for those errors the Appellate Court must grant the defendant a new trial, I have not, therefore, examined the evidence any further than that it had some relation to the objections and exceptions to the evidence received upon the trial and the charge of the trial judge. I have been called upon to examine the charge is remarkably clear, fair and fauitless, except in presenting for consideration of the jury those portions of the evidence which I think were erroneously received upon the trial. In my opinion important evidence was received upon the trial in these respects. "I. "3. The opinion or supposition of the witness, Miller, as to the motive or purpose of De Lacy when he handed Miller the $5,000. The testimony of the defendant was taken before the Senate Committee under resolution passed by the Senate."

The Judge then quotes the resolutions and continues: "The testimeny given by the defendant in answer to questions put to him by the Senate Committee and its counsel, were received in evidence over objection, and exception upon the trial of the indictment of the defendant for bribery of construct the Broadway Railway. I am very decidedly of the opinion that the court erred in a mission of such testimony. the demands on his attention make it almost impossible for him to look after the details of the work which require personal superintendence. The contemplated improvements in the laying of the double track to Union avenue and the increase in the number of trains which the "Fall of Pompei" will require render it necessary to have a superintendent for each division, and thus relieve the General Manager of detail work. It has been decided, therefore, to appoint a superintendent for each division of the road in preparation for the expected rush of business in the fall. The appointments have already been made and will go into effect on September I. For the superintendency of the steam division Mr. O. S. McDowell, who is at present superintendent on the Missouri, Kansus & Texas Railroad, and who is highly recommended by the Missouri Pacific officials, has been selected. Mr. M. A. Shipley has been connected with the road since the beginning of the enterprise and has risen from the construction force to be dispatcher, chief clerk and assistant to the general manager. Several of the Delegates are opposed to considering the plan tomorrow, as it will necessitate several meetings before the matter is disposed of. They do not appreciate the profitableness of attending half a dozen special meetings at which nothing more interesting than the city water service is to be considered. Mayor Francis informed his callers that he could not state yet what action he would take on this topic.

Katie La Bonte, aged 13 years, was arraigned Ratie La Bonte, aged 13 years, was arraigned again to-day before Mayor Francis as an incorrigible girl. She was arrested by Police-Officer Hogan some days ago while loading about Daly's saloon, No. 12 North Seventh street. The officer reported that the child frequented the saloon, which is a prize-fighters' resort, and associated with rough characters. She was in the habit of begging money for the purpose of buying whisky. On this statement the Mayor ordered her committed to the House of Refuge. A stay was granted on condition that the child should be removed from the city. Yesterday she was rearrested, as the condition of the stay had not been compiled with. The Mayor of the deluge. There was rain to the west of St. Louis this morning, though not in great quantities, and all day the clouds have been hanging over the city listlessly waiting for a moment when every one is unprepared to let loose a drenching. They are expected to loaf about until to-morrow. The temperature at yesterday's 6 o'clock a.m. reading was 63 dez.; to-day it was at 62 deg. at the same hour. The 2 o'clock p. m. reading was 69 yesterday, to-day it was 73. The minimum yesterday was 53, to-day it was 61. The high barometer area in the northwest has moved a little further east, but its motion is extremely slow and the temperature in that area remains persistently low. Moorhead reported 40 deg. this morning, a rise of 2 deg. Minnedosa is down to 30, two deg. below freezing, a comfortable August temperature, and St. Vincent reports 36 deg. These are the lowest temperatures in the country. The promise for a decided change in the weather is still lacking, and seersuckers can remain in the wash one day longer.

From the London Truth.

I have been misunderstood about my proposals for the reorganization of the War Office. I am represented as being in favor of the German system, whereas the system which I advocate is the French system. There is a wide difference between the two. In Germany the Emperor is Commander-in-Chief of the army. Under him are two co-ordinate authorities, the War Minister and the Chief of the General Staff.

Both these officials are appointed by the Emperor and work into one another's hands. The Reichstag votes the establishment of men and the money required for the army; but it has no further control over the expenditure, which is generally in excess of the Minister's first estimate, and has to be met by supplementary demands. If any member of the Reichstag asks unpleasant questions he is immediately (as Gen. Brackenbury explained in his evidence) "snuffed out" by the Chancellor, who is always supported by the War Minister. I have a great respect for the military power of Germany, but I trust that such a system as that will never be introduced into England. It is only tolerated in Germany on account of the great personal influence exerted by the Emperor, owing to the success of his policy in 1866 and 1870. In France the War Minister is supreme head of the army. He the Emperor, owing to the success of his policy in 1866 and 1870. In France the War Minister is supreme head of the army. He is Commander-in-Chief as well as Minister. There is no one over him. Parliament is his only master. The Chief of the French General Staff is under his orders; so are the commanders of army corps districts. In case of war the Commander-in-Chief in the field reports direct to the War Minister. Under this system the French Chamber can, and does, exercise, through the responsible Minister, a proper control over both the comptabilite and commandment of the national army. This is the system I advocate for England.

From the Detroit Free Press.

While in Val Verde County in the summer of 1888, investigating some land titles. I attended a camp-meeting. The minister who presided invited those who wished to be prayed for to occupy the front seats. A green-looking young "knight of the lariat," among others, made his way to the front. He was taken in charge by one of the deacons, who thus addressed him: "Now, my dear young friend, don't you love Jesus; Jesus who died that you might live forever in the world beyond; don't you love him?"

"Wa-al," was the answer, "I've hear'n tell on him, an' I guess I hain't got nuthin' agin' him."

Let the reader join in indulging the hope that time has brought to an intelligent idea of Christianity our young friend who had "nothin' agin' him," and I will quote the prayer of the chaplain of a West Texas company just before the storming of Monterey during the Mexican war:

"Oh. Lord," said he, "we are about to join battle with vastly superior numbers of the enemy, and, Heavenly Father, we would like mightily for you to be on our side and help us, but if you can't do it, for Heaven's sake don't go over to the greasers, but just lie low and keep dark, and you will see one of the toughest fights you ever saw in all your born days."

In examining a history of religion in the early days of Texas I find the following remarkable language to have been used by a preacher in a western county during the course of a sermon:

"Now, my dear friends, let us reason together. Suppose you lose your property, you can work for more; if you lose your wives, you can marry again; were you to lose your children, you might have more; but if you lose your immortal souls, up the spout you go."

THE PRESIDENT AND STANFORD. To show that he did not telegraph t Chairman Pattison to use his own discretion about employing counsel in the proceedings to compel STANFORD to answer the questions of the Pacific Railroad Commission, President CLEVELAND has published the following as the wording of his dispatch:

Upon your statement that, in your judg ment, counsel should be employed, I author ize and approve such employment.

No other form of words could more ef fectually shift the responsibility from the President to the Chairman of the Commission. It is a careful reservation of the President's own judgment as to whether answers to legitimate questions should be legally wrung from the Pacific Railroad plunderers or not. from the New York WOBLD. Nearly five million people who voted for Mr. Cleveland honestly believed that "unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation," and supposed that if the Democracy should be re-stored to power the "existing surplus of more than $100,000,000, which has yearly been colected from a suffering people,' stopped, and not allowed to increase more rapidly than ever; that taxation would be reduced "to the lowest limit consistent with due regard to the preservation of the faith of the nation to its creditors and pensioners;" that there would be a "strict enforcement of individual rights against corporate abuses;" that granted to railroad corporations would be re-stored to the public domain," and that there would be "real reform" in the civil service.

If the Democratic party had its way all these pledges would be redeemed. It is due to stupld or selfish leaders that they have been proken. Nothing has been done. The surplus is increasing. Taxation is not reduced. The tariff has not been revised. There have been too much promise and too little practice; too much sham and too little real reform. The train was ten minutes behind time and the President walked up and down the platform with his hands clasped behind his back. He occasionally uncovered his head and mopped the perspiration from his brow with a hand-kerchief. He wore a dark suit and a large-brimmed straw hat. When the train had rolled into the depot Mrs. Cleveland was the first to emerge from the special coach. President Gleveland saw her and walking briskly up helped her to the platform. She imprinted a kiss on his cheek, and then the President offered his hand to Mrs. Folsom. Gen. Greely, with an armful of bundles and wraps, was one of the fast to step out of the special car. Mrs. Cleveland was attired in a brown traveling costume and brown hat with a big white rosette, and she appeared to be enjoying the best of besith. In order to get to the President's carriage the party had to cross a train of cars which stood in the way. Mrs. Cleveland led the way and nimbly ascended the steps of a car, crossed the platform and alignted on the other side. The President's short journey was not performed as quickly or as gracefully. The President, Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Folsom got into the carriage and Aibert, the executive driver, was soon speeding the browns up Pennsylvania svenne. House and was driven to the Pennsylvania

They found him and put him under arrest. The prisoner asked Thomas to so with him to collect some money due for work, The officer consented. Miller prodes a horse, the same he was riding when arrested, and Thomas rode a mule. When three miles from Chattanooga Miller put Purs to his horse and galloped off, shouting as he rode away: "Now catch me if you can." Thomas drew two revolvers and fired eleven shots after the fleeing prisoner, but failed to hit him. Miller then came direct to Atlanta, where he was arrested on a description wired by the Chief of Police of Chattanooga. While talking to a reporter about his arrest, Miller said: "I don't mind going to jail, but I hate awfully to meet my wife. You see she loved me a heap and trusted me a great deal, and just treated her like a dog. I hope that they will not let her come to the jail."

New York, August 25.—After a week's deliberation it was determined last night that Jay Gould's grandson, the black-eyed little fellow who came to Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould a week ago yesterday morning, J. Gould a week ago yesterday morning, should be named Kingdon Gould. When the little chap was a few hours old his father remarked that he would leave the naming of the child to his wife. Mrs. Gould decided to use her family name of kingdon. The fond efforts to impress upon the youngster that his name was Kingdon met with indifferent success. He had just had dinner, and was mighty well satisfied with his seven days in the world; any name was as good as Kingdon to him. He would have blinked his black eyes and firted his little fists just the same if he had been addressed as Tomor Jack. It was suggested that as the boy reaches the marble and kite age, it will be difficult to fasten any name on him other than King or Don, and as both are names synonymous with power, they will not be seriously objected to by the young man's parents. In due time the boy will be christened. Mr. Jay Gould when in town is quite content with Presbyterian views as expounded by Dr. Paxton, but young Kingdon Gould will become a member of the Episcopal Church by his mother's preferences.

Hill of New York. Mr. G. K. Woodward, who is to have charge of the paper, is a New Yorker. He said yesterday: 'I am not willing to foreshadow the policy of the paper, but I am willing to say this: Cleveland owes his election to the Civil-Service Reform Association. He has given that association offense by disregarding civil-service reform ideas in States where such associations do exist. Blaine is offensive to the association, and unless he, or a man of his character, is nominated by the Republicans, thereby driving the association to the Democrate, there is no hope for Cleveland to be re-elected. In my judgment Hill is as strong as Cleveland, or stronger, and, where Cleveland has only the one chance that I have named, Hill has, I might say, every chance.'

NEW PUBLICATIONS,

PUBLISHED TO-DAY.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

FOR SEPTEMBER. SUPERB AUTUMN NUM-BER. The magazine opens with Mr. Edward L. Wilson's finely illustrated article on The Modern Nile; the Rev. W. S. Rainsford, D. D., Rector of St. George's Church, New York, contributes an entertaining account of Camping and Hunting in the Shoshone, and the successful pursuit of large game, beautifully illustrated; there is the first part of a unique and charming Japanese story, entitled The Sacred Flame of Torin Ji, written by Mr. E. H. House (for many years a resident in Japan), and illustrated by Mr. George Foster Barnes; the Thackeray letters are continued, with some reminiscences by Miss Kate Perry, both illustrated. A timely and most important contribution is An Upublished Draft nunciation, thence to Calvary Cemetery. Friends of a National Constitution by Edmund Randolph, (with facsimile) by Moncure D. Conway, which will attract great attention among all students of the American Constitution: two highly interesting and valuable papers are The Development of the American University, by Prof. George T. Ladd, of Yale College, and English in Newspapers and Novels, by Prof. Adams Sherman Hill; there are poems by Mrs. James T. Fields, Julia C. R. Dorr, Louise Imogen Guiney and John Boyle O'Reilly; an exciting railroad story, entitled Flandroe's Mogul, by A. C. Gordon; an out-of-door paper by Maurice Thompson, etc. N.Y. EVENING POST.—SCRIBNER'S shores no sign of summer lassitude customary with the magazines at this season, and does not relax in its standard, or fall short of its remarkable excellence. It has carefully refrained from literary splutter hitherto, and it seems equally determined to give us no literary slops.

age, was arrested last night at Strait's Hotel, opposite the Union Depot, apparently suffer-ng from an attack of delirium tremens. He clearly demented at present and his condition is supposed to be due to drink. He stated to the police that he was formerly employed as book keeper by the hardware firm of James Warnock & Co., Gait, Ontario, and that he embezzled some money from them and left Canada. How much he embezzled he did not knew, but said it would not amount to over $100 or $200. He is not at all clear in his statements and his mental condition is such that the police place no confidence in what he says. He will probably be sent to the City Hospital or Insane Asylum.

CHICAGO, Ill., August 25.-Wool is dull, and Franklin Avenu peat their triumphs of last year, and accordingly had their agents early in the BONDS accordingly had their agents early in the country offering farmers from 1 to 3 cents more for their fleeces than was warranted by the market prices then prevailing. Wool, growers were delighted with the situation. There was a shout that wool was too low. Estimates were produced showing a shortage in the domestic clip of from 10 to 20 per cent of account of a severe winter in the Territories and drouth in other sections. The Australian and European clips were also reported short and manufacturers were known to be but lightly stocked. The statistic situation seemed in favor of higher prices, and the honest farmer, who had not kept track of statistics, allowed his clip to silp through his hands at several cents per pound advance on the expected price. For three or four weeks everybody that had a dollar to invest wen wool gathering. Local speculators and buy-ers, most of them merchants with accounts against the farmers, quickly heard of the bright outlook for wool, and contracted for every fleece, whether sheared or still on the We offer for sale Citized Av.) CAYLOR against the farmers, quickly heard of the bright outlook for wool, and contracted for every fleece, whether sheared or still on the sheeps' back, that could be found in the neighborhood. Thus this year's clip passed in a few weeks from what is known in the trade as first hands. Eastern and Chicago and St. Louis dealers had bought liberally, but the great bulk of the clip was captured by local buyers, and in their hands it still rests.

Meantime in the wool market proper, the places where manufacturers buy their raw material, there were no developments. Manufacturers did not seem to want wool at any price. Furthermore the course of London prices did not indicate any fear of a shortage in the Old World production of wool. Under these circumstances nothing but stubbors. In the Old World production of wool. Under these circumstances nothing but stubbors ness would keep prices up. Early in July manufacturers bought a little and in order to catch their orders, dealers made concessions, and prices began to sag. For six weeks there has been no change in the situation, except that prices nave been weakening steadily and are now from 2 to 3 cents per pound lower than in June. Manufacturers are buying but a small amount, claiming that there is no chance for profit in the woolen goods market. The bulk of this year's clip is still in the country, and the holders decline to part with an ounce of it at the reduced prices, preferring to hold it indefinitely rather than take a loss of 7 to 10 per cent. As country banks are willing lenders ea atong position.

Consequently things are at a standstill. The receipts at this point for the first seven months of 1887 have been less than 17,000,000 hs. a decrease of over 10,000,000 hs compared with last year's receipts. There is a falling-off in receipts at Eastern points, but not so great proportionately as here. Eastern dealers having bought more heavily, and, it is said, more rashly in June than the Chicago men. The wool interests of Chicago, notwithstanting this year's light receipt

Before sail could be shortened they were taken aback, and the foremasis and mizzenmasts were whipped out of the vessel as quickly as if they had been straws. As the two masts went by the board, the entangling rigging added danger to the ship's safety and the sea which had been lashed to fury, broke over the deck with great force, tearing everything away before it, and the sailors with axes and knives worked two hours before they had the working clear. Then a heavy sea struck the vessel under her counter, lifting her stern high above water and wrenching off the rudder and the rudder post. This started a very serious leak, and every man was ordered to work at the pumps. For more than three days without time to get a mouthful to eat the captain and his eleven men worked night and day to keep their rudderless and sinking ship affoat. A large dog belonging to the captain seemed to realize the condition of affairs, and crouched on the deck near the men, now and then looking appealingly into their faces as if to encourage them to keep up.

Soon after sundown on Monday night a steamer's lights were sighted. Capt. Guara got a piece of canvas and after saturating it with run tied it to fire. After burning it a little, while the captain smothered it and then relighted it to give the appearance of a flash light, the light from the wreck was seen from the deck of the steamer which proved to be city of Washington, Capt. Rettig bore down on the light and was long-side the wreck as 9 o'clock. He blew his whistle and it was answered by a violent ringing of the ship's bell. Then a boat was lowered in charge of Second Officer Mann, who returned an hour afterwards after a severe struggle against the heavy seas, with Capt. Guara, his eleven sailors and the dog, all of them so exhausted and nearly starved that they had to be almost carried over the steamer's side. Capt. Rettig had ready for them coffee and a palatable meal for their weak stomachs, and administered stimulants. They were also provided with dry clothing and good sleeping rooms and brought safely to this port. It was like the parting of brothers when the people left the City of Washington yesterday and bade good-bye. The Spanish Consulsent the sailors to a boarding-house and the captain to a hotel.

be here to-morrow. They come for three games-the last of their home series with the games—the last of their home series with the Champions, and come determined to capture three scalps. The Indians' war-paint has been brightened and their war-whoop strengthened since the acquisition of Chief Roseman, Pitcher Weidman and Baby Jones. The Mets give the champions the hardest kind of a fight for supremacy, and the contests are marked by excellent playing, and are well worth witnessing. The batteries will be King and Boyle and Weidman and Sommers.

ABOUT BINGHAM.

The mud-slinger of the Cincinnati Enquirer is into the mire up to his neck and trying to throw some of it at Detroit because the Wolverine management signed Beatin and Kinslow in advance of the fossils who run the Cincinnati Club. The mud-slinger's efforts create only amusement in the City of the Straits.—
[Detroit Free Press. Exercit Free Press.

Kirby not only has a sore arm, but is lazy and unambitious. All through the game he used a slow ball, which fell as it came to the plate, and a drop that was nearly as slow. The Indianapolis Club sold the man to Cloveland on false pretenses. Another long rest without pay will probably be his lot.—[Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

Innd Plain-Dealer.

Just now the Louisvilles are in a pretty badly crippled condition. Ramsey's arm is handicapped by a strained tendon, Kerins' injured so badly that he will not be able to play behind the but this season, and Chamberlain's arm so sore that he cannot pitch with effectiveness for several days to come. Neal and Hecker will probably do the pitching in the next few games.

The Mets seem to be the happiest and bestplayed here this season. They make the game all the more enjoyable by their good-natured remarks, and are deserved by popular with the purrons of the game. There is not another stable the Association which receives better

Threats, persuasion, offers of fabulous sums of money, all having falled to spur the Bostons to play good ball, the inhabitants of the Hub as a last resort have begun to sling poetical effusions at the team, and there is small doubt that the result will be the early disbandment of the cluo or the winning of the pennant. It is a kill or cure remedy. The outlook for the poor players is very dark.—[Exchange.

Dalrymple says that he expects the Pittsburg team to improve in play from the present, and that play, attendance and support will be better. He has great confidence in the team's ability to do better, and deplores the shortness of pitchers early in the season.
McCormick unfers a little from rheymatism in the ankle, but it does not interfere with his pitching. The attendance at the games is improving with the team's victories. If the present gait is maintained it will make the club financially solid.

Spalding is said to have an agent in the West and Northwest sizing up the material there with a view to next season. Another phenomenal pitcher or two wouldn't come amiss, you know.

'You will, no doubt, be pleased to hear that I am feeling as well, if not better, than I ever have in my life. This training business is something new to me, and when I first began it was hard work, especially as I was a little high in flesh. I would rather have a two hours' hard battle than go through my first week's training again. But it is all right now, and I am better off now that it is all over. I am now down to 138 pounds, and I am certain that I could get off ten pounds more and be strong by the time I meet Carney. My trainer is Bob Drew, a very clever fellow, who gives me every possible attention, and, while he induless me in some things, he is very strict where he ought to be. Let my friends in Boston known how well I sm. On the first of the month they will be able to judge better of my condition when I am in Boston.

Jake Kilrain is determined that Sullivan shall not get the best of him by preceding him to England. Charley Mitchell, in all probability, will supervise the training on the other side. It is now believed that if the Dwyer brothers monster test monial benefit before he departs.

It is now believed that if the Dwyer brothers had not declared to win the Omnibus Stakes with Hanover, their colt Kingston would have won, as he was never extended in the race. Fitzpatrick rode according to orders, and, believing that Hanover was winning, never put the son of Spendshrift to his best speed. This is the opinion of several competent judges who witnessed the race.

Sam Luke, the English jockey, who has gone home for a trip, tells Englishmen that the horses seen in Jerome and Monmouth Parks were 30 per cent better than the flyers on Newmarket Heath. He says: "They are bigger boned, sounder, better in every way than our English horses.
